

Renting Your Home? 7 Things You Need to Know

Written by Kathryn Tuggle Published November 23, 2011 FOXBusiness

FOLLOW FOX BUSINESS

@foxbusiness · 50.4K followers

Like

Be the first of your friends to like this.

MORE STORIES

Attracting Some App Love (Daily Finance)

Waiter's Phony $10 Tip Includes Religious Lesson (Daily Finance)

Boomers: We Have A Lot to be Thankful for

Ten Tax Moves to Make Before the End of the Year

Print

Email

Share

Comments

Like

8

Share

Facing a down economy and uncertain housing market, many homeowners are looking to make extra cash by renting out rooms in their homes.

According to Harvard's Joint Center for Housing Studies 2011 report, "recession-induced income and job losses have forced many former homeowners to turn to renting...many more owners will become renters in the coming years—and will remain so for some time as they build savings and reestablish their credit ratings."

The study shows that from 2006 to 2010, the number of renter households rose annually by 692,000 to reach 37 million last year, an all-time high. Likewise, the number of owner households dropped by 201,000 annually during the same period.

RELATED VIDEO

More Homeowners Missing Mortgage Payments

Figuring Out a Homeowner's Loan

RELATED SLIDESHOW

How to Winterize Your Home

RELATED STORIES

Are You Ready to Cover Your Parents' Health-Care Costs?

Experts say that while renting out your home can be a great source of extra cash, without landlord experience, homeowners may be in for more headaches than they bargained for. We checked in with experts to find the top seven things first-time renters need to know before opening their doors to a stranger.

1.) Write a Lease

The best way to avoid problems with a tenant is to have a written lease, says Zachary Schorr, lead real estate attorney at Los Angeles-based Schorr Law. While it may sound obvious, some homeowners prefer to keep things "casual" and choose not to spend the money to have a lease drawn up.

"The written lease can spell out the terms of the tenancy, provide for instances of default and even allow the landlord to recover attorneys' fees in the event he/she is forced to file an eviction action to evict a problem tenant. It is always best to plan ahead by spelling out all of the key terms of the tenant's occupancy to anticipate problem areas before they arise," says Schorr.

First-time landlords should contact an attorney before drawing up their first lease to make sure the lease is worded properly and contains all the necessary information, says Robert Kaye, a managing partner at Kaye & Bender, a Florida lawfirm that provides legal services to more than 800 condo, co-op and homeowner associations.

"Many times people tend to be a little wary of contacting an attorney because there is a cost involved, but paying an attorney's fees up front is going to be a lot cheaper than going into litigation with a tenant if you have a lease that doesn't protect you," says Kaye.

2.) Meet Face to Face

"You may want to have dinner with the person, and if you don't like having dinner with them, then this isn't the person you want to share your home with," says David Innocenzi, managing director at Heddings Property Group in New York. "If you don't want to do dinner, then at least do coffee. Sure, you may need the money, but you have to separate what's best for you financially from what's going to maintain the best emotional balance in your house."

While a few face-to-face meetings may not tell you everything you need to know about a tenant, it can still be a great indication if the arrangement is going to work, says Innocenzi. Just like a company wouldn't hire an employee based solely on a resume, a landlord shouldn't take on a tenant without putting a face to a name.

"If you meet a tenant through a friend or are referred to that person, one meeting should do it. But if you put an ad in the paper or online and are leasing to a stranger, this is doubly important," says Innocenzi.

3.) Put Expectations in Writing and Set Boundaries

Use or Lose Flexible Spending Account Funds

Families Talk Turkey at Thanksgiving Financial Meetings

Of Riches, Tangible and Otherwise

Small Businesses Struggle to Find Credit in Post-Recession World

Job-Hunting Tips for College Seniors

Canceling a Credit Card is OK -- if Done Wisely

Show More

Advertisement for Edward Jones featuring a couple and the text: 'Are You Financially Prepared for the Future? Brought to you by Edward Jones. Making sense of investing.'

Advertisement for Fox Business Small Business Center with the text: 'Grow your small business. Visit the Fox Small Business Center. FOX BUSINESS SMALL BUSINESS CENTER'

Innocenzi recommends setting rules about little things like who is going to purchase toilet paper and paper towels, along with detailing in writing who is going to do chores like vacuuming the stairs or washing the dishes.

“If you are renting a room and you only have one kitchen, then let your tenant know whether or not they can participate in a family meal. If they do, perhaps they need to contribute to the groceries or clean the kitchen afterwards, but it needs to be made clear,” he says.

Landlords shouldn't take for granted that a tenant knows what's acceptable and not acceptable to use. As time goes on, a tenant may become more like a part of the family than a business arrangement, but initially, a homeowner has to be very clear about the “little things.”

“A tenant should know details about everything—even how much food they can put in the refrigerator. They need to know what is expected from them, and the periodic requirements of chores. These things can really be a problem when they pile up and can become a much bigger issue. If they aren't addressed they can boil over and the whole house can be fighting,” says Kaye.

4.) Check Income/ Credit

The most important first step in taking on a renter is to run a credit check, advises Kathy Braddock, co-founder of independent residential real estate firm Rutenberg Realty in New York.

“You certainly don't want a tenant who has been known to skip out and not pay their bills,” she warns.

In order to run a credit check, homeowners need to get permission from a prospective tenant.

“It's perfectly normal to request a credit report so you can see where their standing is in the financial community.”

When it comes to asking about income, Innocenzi says it can be a touchy subject, but homeowners shouldn't feel guilty about asking potential tenants how much they make. Some brokerages require prospective tenants to fill out formal spreadsheets detailing how much they make, how often they get paid, and whether or not they expect an annual bonus. The right renter isn't just a nice person—they're a nice person with the right financial qualifications.

“If you are renting out your home because you need an extra income, then you have to ask these questions. The biggest mistake is taking on someone in who is going to become a liability. You may be uncomfortable asking because you aren't a professional landlord, but this is how professional landlords make money—they ask these questions,” Innocenzi says.

5.) Be Clear What's Included in Rent

“Now that everyone has cable and Internet, how do you share that? Do they have their own cable box or do they join the family room to watch TV? Do you have WiFi? If so, can they access it in their room? These are all things that need to be addressed,” says Innocenzi.

Even things like whether or not you’re going to allow a tenant to do their laundry in your home needs to be addressed, says Braddock. Things like detergent and fabric softener can really add up, and if the tenant is expected to replace those items, that needs to be addressed up front.

“Things like who is doing the laundry, whether or not a tenant must bring their own sheets and towels, what spot they are allowed to park in in the driveway—all this must be discussed,” Braddock details. “You have a person in your home, and for privacy’s sake and economic sake, you have to think about everything.”

6.) Ask for Character References and Do a Background Check

Even if you’ve checked a person’s income level, you should still ask for a reference from an employer, says Innocenzi. A person could make six figures in a year, but be very difficult to work with. If you found your tenant via an ad in the paper or online, it’s doubly important to know who you’re dealing with.

“Ask for references from former landlords, colleagues, friends, basically anything that tells you who you are taking in.”

Background checks can also be done online for around $30 and take about 15 minutes. A background check will reveal any previous arrests or run-ins with the law. A tenant’s approval is not required in order to run most background checks, Innocenzi says.

7.) Get a Security Deposit

Before allowing a tenant to move in, Braddock says a landlord must receive the first month’s rent and at least a month’s rent to serve as a security deposit.

“The whole point of holding a security deposit is that it is a built-in buffer against losing a month’s rent if they skip out. If a personality conflict breaks out with a tenant, you may be more prone to losing that tenant than if you were operating a traditional apartment building,” says Braddock.

A tenant shouldn’t be offended that you want a security deposit, says Braddock; the money could also be used in the event of damage to the property, which could have been unintentional.

“You want someone with a little bit of skin in the game so they are willing to protect your property,” she says. “Otherwise you’re really jeopardizing yourself financially.”

When the Cashier Asks for Your Zip Code
Why So Many Baby Boomers are Getting Divorced
Nokia Siemens Slashing 23% of Workforce
Wall Street Thrashed by Cascading Debt Fears
California Continues to Spend Like it Has Money

7 Things You Should Prepare for a Happy Retirement
(Allstate Blog)
Most expensive states: Texas (Bankrate.com)
7 Famous People with OCD (HeathCentral.com)
'L-Word' Actress Kicked Off a Plane (Mevio)
Steve Jobs and the Seven Rules of Success
(Entrepreneur.com)

[what's this]

SHARE THIS ARTICLE

0 Like
 8
 0

NEWSLETTER SIGNUP

Sign up for free e-mail news alerts from FoxNews.com and FoxBusiness.com.
 Enter Your Email Address

MORE FROM FOX BUSINESS

TOP STORIES

Reuters

MF Global Workers Likely Violated Securities Laws

Exclusive: Investigators examining the disappearance of as much as $1.2 billion in MF Global client funds say it's likely that workers at the firm violated securities laws and that those violations could ultimately turn out to be criminal in nature.

News
Euro, Economic Anxiety Slams Wall Street

Investing
Don't Sweat Germany's Weak Bond Offering

Technology
Amazon May Move 12M Kindle Fire Tablets in 2012

POPULAR VIDEOS

Newt Gingrich Climbing in the Polls, Cain Holds Steady

Race for 2012 continues

Why the U.S. Should Let Israel be

What to Expect from the New Windows Phone

Booming Franchise: Magnolia Bakery

Thai Flooding Impacting Technology Sector

The Motley Fool	INTERNATIONAL BUSINESS TIMES	YAHOO! FINANCE	Daily Finance	FOX SMALL BUSINESS CENTER	MarketWatch	247wallst.com
Hershey's Dividend Is Safe	UC Davis Chancellor: Police Disobeyed Orders in Using Pepper Spray	Roubini: Supporters of a Gold Standard Are 'Lunatics and Hacks'	Nokia Smartphones Finally Attracting Some App Love	Shop Owners Prep for Small Business Saturday	Probe set in UC Davis pepper spraying	America's Disappearing Restaurant Chains
Finding Value in Midwest Regional Banks	Winner of Republican National Security Debate: The Economy?	D.C.'s Partisan 'Ping-Pong' Game Hurts Consumers, Business: Royal Caribbean CEO	Waiter's Phony $10 Tip Includes Religious Lesson	Moving at the Speed of Marketing	Pandora takes lumps on outlook concerns	Cities Where Violent Crime Is Soaring
1 Reason Harmonic May Be Headed for a Slowdown	Netflix Shares Hits 52-Week Low as Wheels Come Off Web 3.0 Party Wagon	Roubini: Europe's Contagion "Has Now Gone Viral...and Global"	The New Homeless: Living Behind the Wheel	Small Business of the Day: Fancy Designs	Oil ends 1.9% lower at $96.17 a barrel	The Eight Beers Americans No Longer Drink
Colgate-Palmolive's Dividend Is Safe	2012 Republican Presidential Campaign: Will There be a Jon Huntsman Surge?	Nouriel Roubini: Government Gridlock 'Ensures' 2012 Recession	'Mad Money's' Cramer Blames Monday's Stock Market Slide on Europe	HSA Plans: Small Business Solution to Fighting Health-Care Costs?	Metals Stocks: Gold ends at loss but off session lows	The Eleven Holiday Gifts Americans Can't Afford
5 Companies We're Thankful for ... and 2 We're Leaving Out	After 35 Years, Are PCs Now Senior Citizens?	GDP Revised Down: Crisis in Europe Key to U.S. Economy	Sane Investing Strategies for This Insane Market	Don't See What You Need? Launch Your Own Product Line	Audio: Radio Update: Deere a rare green spot on the board	Cities Where Violent Crime Is Plummeting

SECTIONS

Home
Video
News
Investing
Technology
Personal Finance
Home Office
Travel
On Air
Small Business

BROWSE

Stock Quotes
Video
Anchors & Reporters
TV Show Schedule
Tools
Topics
Flight Tracker
Mobile
Apps and Downloads

SHOWS

After the Bell
Cavuto
Closing Bell
Follow the Money
Freedom Watch
Imus in the Morning
Lou Dobbs Tonight
Power and Money
Stossel
Tom Sullivan
Varney & Company
The Willis Report

ABOUT

About Fox Business
Channel Finder
Advertise with Us
Jobs at Fox Business
Internships
Terms of Use
Privacy Statement
Ad Choices
Press

FOLLOW

Facebook
Twitter
YouTube
RSS
Newsletters

Quotes delayed at least 15 minutes. Real-time quotes provided by BATS Exchange. Market Data provided by Interactive Data (Terms & Conditions). Powered and Implemented by Interactive Data Managed Solutions. Company fundamental data provided by Morningstar. Earnings estimates data provided by Zacks. Mutual fund data provided by Lipper. Economic data provided by Econoday. Dow Jones & Company Terms & Conditions.

This material may not be published, broadcast, rewritten, or redistributed. ©2011 FOX News Network, LLC. All rights reserved.